HAVING MARVELOUS TIME—AT PLAY OF THAT NAME

As summer nears, drama critics are wont to view Broadway openings with a skeptical eye—for you know how frequently a hit premiere occurs in June. Last night, however, they were startled out of their spring naps by a wide-awake young production, "Having Marvelous Time" which opened at the East Side Theatre. A very ambitious comedy, it alternately tickles the funny bone, the tear sacs and the spine. An indolent audience found itself keyed up to high tension from start to finish, for although "Having Marvelous Time" has a story by no means sensational, the youth and high spirits of the players lend a refreshing vitality to the plot that obscures all else.

Depicting the joys and jars of a high school class, the first act introduces us to a jolly cast of characters, the Class of June 1938. To the amazement of the East Siders, this class cannot be persuaded to take the mythical elevator, having been warned about this in earliest infancy. Worse still, they immediately start selling protection to Service Squad members. Fond memories were awakened in the audience as they saw these optimistic freshmen attempting to beat the unbeatable homework game. Although your critic found the first act on the whole unexciting, nevertheless, some of the most humorous scenes are in it.

As the plot thickens, we get some idea of the big business methods to be found in a high school. High finance is introduced as dimes reluctantly find their way into the 2A Class treasury. One of the most hilarious mob scenes presented is one depicting the last 2A Class meeting. Angry demands on the class funds are angrily shouted down, as a faction urges free parties and bus trips.

An interesting point your correspondent noted was the amazing improvement in jokes and puns from the freshman year on. From the "Who was that lady I saw you with?" type of joke, we advance to such humor as: "They laughed when I stepped up to the piano but when my suspenders broke, I held my sides."

THE DRAMA

AND YOU'LL WANT TO SEE OUR PLAY

New York Chimes)

A scene that positively wowed the audience was the 3A Dance Class. Nostalgic memories of our adolescence were brought back vividly as we saw patient maidens being trod on by awkward fellows in the intricacies of the fox trot. Their grace at the 3A Get-Acquainted Dance was well worth the labor, however.—To hold the One Girl in one's arms—ah, yes, we too remembered that thrill.

In a city high school, however, we learned things don't really begin to swing until the Senior year. A class "rec" (to say the least) was seen (and heard) and then with ice cream scarcely melted and flowers barely wilted, came the exciting football season. Control was gained of the team but not of the ball for we found the East Side team a losing one.

A scene that audience as well as cast found hard to forget was the Senior Prom. Midnight blue skies studded with stars, the twinkling lights of distant buildings, soothing music, and—the audience sighed in unison for the lost days of youth. Directors Ryan and Cuthbert, assisted by Miss Esther Martin, showed skillful technique in the handling of such scenes.

Then smash! bang! we were transported into the heckling 4A term with a rip-roaring election. There ensued much scrambling of Torch subscriptions, dance tickets, and yearbook material. Your correspondent shared the players' joy when diplomas were finally distributed to the hard-working class. He left the theatre, strangely soothed and awakened to pleasant memories of days when there lay at his feet the world to conquer. To the Class of June 1938, he could not help saying: "Good luck!"

"Game That Thrills" Proves Hit

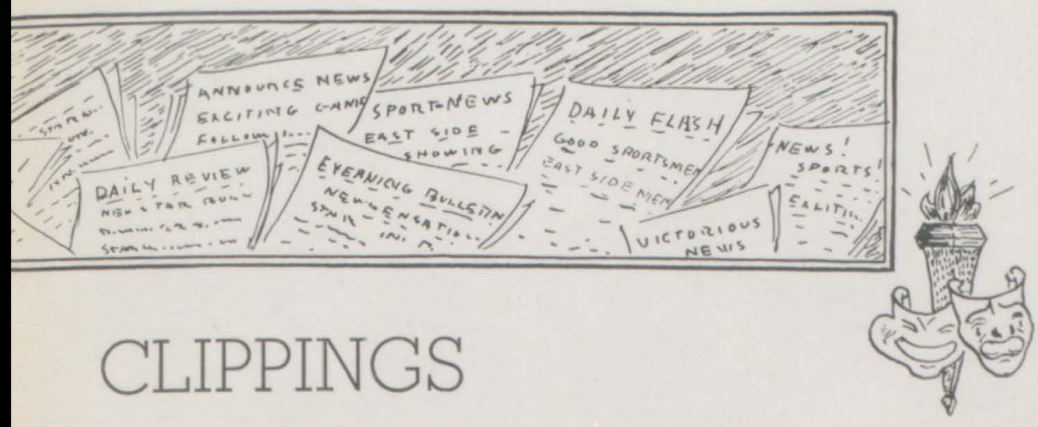

Opening to a capacity audience at the Newark Stadium Theatre, this drama of the football field alternately amused, saddened and thrilled the crowds who thronged to its premiere. In it, no doubt, the East Side Production Company has its hit of the century, due not only to the star-studded cast but to the skillful direction of Louis Horwitz. Gene Hermanski, Charlie Solomita, Joe Bevacqua Max Nahulak and Danny Scotti are featured players. Others in the cast who contribute immensely by their portrayal of minor roles are Anthony Napurano Vic Ranero, Ming De Pretis, Anthony Genovese, Jack Inamorato and Steve Lordi.

Dealing with the feud between two city high schools, the opening scenes show how the rivalry began when the city championship was snatched from East Side by a fighting West Side eleven. The victory goes unavenged for three years until the Class of June 1938 appears on the scene. Then, having obtained control of the football team, Hermanski and other young gallants of the class swear to take revenge on West Side. Matters, however, do not work out that way. As the season wears on, we see the team losing game after game, the championship being definitely out. To make matters worse, Ming De Pretis, expected to star at center, breaks a finger in practice. His despondent figure on the bench at the games strikes a definite role of pathos. Vic Ranero and Anthony Genovese, aspirants for his position, give excellent portrayals of gallant losers when Max Nahulak is shifted to center. Director Lou Horwitz shows particular skill in the handling of scenes depicting growing disgust among East Side supporters.

The fateful game approaches, with West Side in direct line for championship, while East Side, the underdog, is considered a "pushover" team. Again, Horwitz's handling keeps the audience in gripping suspense as the game is postponed and postponed because of weather conditions.

The final thrilling upset of the champion West Side eleven by the determined Iron Dukes, who thus snatched the championship from them as they did them in 1934, was hailed with cheers by the crowds viewing the production at the City Stadium Theatre.

Due honor must be awarded to Steve Lordi, team waterboy, whose comical wit lightened many a serious moment. Mr. Anthony Napurano and Mr. Paul Bogatko, two dashing rogues, are also to be hailed for their performances as coaches of the East Side team. In short we want to compliment all the players in "The Game That Thrills" for being fine examples of courageous young manhood.

Vaudeville At East Side Theatre Praiseworthy

To the amazement of the audience, vaudeville acts presented at the East Side Theatre yesterday were actually enthralling. After a long run of mediocre acts, it was refreshing to view the antics of Dan Cantalupo, champion gymnast, and Max Nahulak and his Men Swimmers.

Cantalupo, whom we all remember as the protege of that grand old man, Coach Butterworth, occasioned many ohs and ahs as he performed almost unbelievable gyrations on the horizontal bar and in tumbling. It's small wonder that he is state title holder in these events. Critics viewing the performance were unanimous in asserting that Danny will go far in the gymnastic field.

Another noteworthy event was the swimming exhibition staged by Mr. Nahulak and his troupe. Flashing through the green depths of the huge indoor tank, Max gave a flawless performance in the breast and back strokes. His assistants, "Skippy" Genovese and Danny Scotti, amazed the audience by their lightning-like completion of a medley relay race.

These swimmers are former high school stars of Coach Dick Miller at East Side. The audience, we're glad to say, recognized the ability and form of these boys and gave them a tremendous round of applause.

Opus At Riverbank Theatre Technical Success

Although "Batters Up" the current attraction at the Riverbank Theatre is only a mediocre drama, it is absolutely perfect technically. A story of the ups and downs of a baseball team, the baseball form, ability and interpretation of the players is strikingly flawless. The action centers about the East Side coach, Horace Butterworth, and is, when boiled down, a character study of him. Local coaches, who view the picture, will learn valuable lessons from Mr. Butterworth. As the story goes on, it is shown how the personality of a coach can inspire his players to bigger and better efforts. Lester Price plays the role of a high school student, ready to sacrifice all for the glory of his alma mammy. Charles Gerard, right-fielder, Nick Pastewait, right-fielder, and Gene Hermanski, left-fielder, all fine players, assist in making the production a delight for all baseball fans.

"Cinder Thrills" Interesting Drama

That epic of track and field, "Cinder Thrills," now playing at the Park Theatre, has amazed even its producers by being a great success. Not a story of defeated athletes rising victorious over seemingly impossible odds, it is a story of athletes, consistent winners, faced by defeat. Joe Bevacqua, starred as shot putt champ in city high schools, with Gene Hermanski and Danny Scotti,

Featured Performers

1. Suzi-Q right and truck on down! Our dancers, Lee DeJohn, Danny Cantalupo, Sadie Alaimo and Carmine Forte, just can't help beating out that rhythm for the cameraman.

2. Yes, it's the soapbox orators! Rusty McCoole, Pat Doyle, Doctor Kaslaitis and Senator Bober are in a pensive mood, probably planning for their careers as high-powered politicians.

3. Although Butch Golda, Marie Burke and Mary Pannullo look a trifle wind-blown at present, in just a few moments they'll turn on the personality that won them their title. James Fitzgerald is absent.

4. Careful!—Irene Kobushefska, Edward Konopka and Sadie Restivo may look angelic but they'll nab you for a ticket sooner or later. John Tirpak is also said to have most school spirit and is probably tracking down a client now.

5. Although Lottie Dziedzic, Marie Cicalese, Bert Preuster and John Herlihy (peeking over Marie's shoulder) were elected the quietest—still!—we know a few tales!

6. Here they are, folks! Our champion vote-getters! May we present those popular lads and lasses, Katie Hager, class treasurer; Rose Gentempo, vice president; Ming DePretis, class president; and Victor Russo, who retired from active politics in February.

7. Watch your step when around these flirtatious persons! There's Joan Gronsky, flashing the old come-hither, along with Chet Kalata (those books don't fool us, Chet!), Pete Stegner, and the vivacious Carolyn Waclavek.

8. Ah, what examples of feminine pulchritude and manly perfection! Elected the best looking, Angie Bertocchi, James Genovese and Joe Casale surely deserve it. Anne Spangenberger, another class beauty, is among the missing.

1. Yes, Ellen McCoole, one of the class scholars, ranks just that. Rudy Rowland and Dominic Prete also have exceptionally high records. The bashful Nellie Schultz is nowhere to be seen but she also belongs in this group.

2. Not a basketball or a tennis racquet in sight—but here are Ann Tetar, Ann Hencoski and Joe Bevacqua (stop hogging space, Joe), our class athletes. Gene Hermanski "vants to be alone" and is not in the picture.

3. Who would think to look at their academic pose that Tess Masciola, Dot Schuster, Jack Lynch and Taffy Barbosa can go to town on their musical instruments? —and how! (Ho, ho, look at Lynch trying to break the camera!)

4. Our class babies are looking very cherub-like here. Ida Perinia, Katie Turner, Joe Pulido and Vinnie Fallone are sometimes not so angelic, however. By the way, it is their size, not their mentality, whch is babyish.

5. Ho, ho, look at Sammy Montagna and Tony D'Andrea! ! That grin on their faces tells us that they've just sprung one of their notorious snake jokes on the unsuspecting cameraman. Tony, with his stooge, Albert Daher (not here) specializes in side-splitters.

6. Heavens! Here are those sophisticates, Andy Barkosky (what's so interesting on the ground, my mad Russian?), Kay Riccio, Herb Schuster and Helen Elkewicz. They're just too cool, calm and collected for words!

7. Sorry we can't give you much of a glimpse of their attire but here are the best dressers of the class, Johnny Padovano, Ann Leonardis, Estelle Pociask and James Petrolle. (Playing peek-a-boo, Bullets?)

..—...—.——...—..—Flashed to You Through the Courtesy

GOOD evening, ladies and gentlemen! Tonight, June 22, 1958, being the twentieth anniversary of the release of the Class of June 1938 from East Side High School, we are privileged to take you to the Malone Hotel, "Service—if you can get it—With A Smile", where a reunion is taking place. Now we turn the mike over to that dippy doodle, that confused Confucius, Albert Daher. Take it away! * * * *

Hello, everyone, this is your addled announcer, Albert Daher, speaking to you from the Starless Ballroom. At my side stands my sympathetic stooge, Tony Baloney D'Andrea, who will relay the flashes to me as the classmates enter in gala array. The music you hear is that of Walter Macheska and his noted Iron Dukes. They are playing their opening number, "The Jolly (?) Student (?)". We are honored to have here tonight the principal and vice principal, Mr. Cuthbert and Miss Ryan. It will be remembered that they were the faculty advisers of the Class of June 1938.

Seated before me is Governor Clifford Dolan, potential presidential candidate, and on his right is Miss Janet Lipuma, Secretary of the No-Labor-If-We-Can-Help-It-Dept. On either side of them sit Senators Nahulak and Strus, who occasionally look daggers at one another. They disagree on the Warga-Gonzalez Bill for the abolition of high schools. The orchestra is now playing the "Dopey Diddle," with vocalizing by Cetnarski and Tomko. The dance floor is packed—many of the classmates are indulging in the Small Pineapple, off-spring of the Big Apple. Bessie Cuidera and Stanley Lucas, now a dance team at Noseland, are swinging a mean hoof.

The dancing has been concluded now and everyone has returned to his seat. The Rt. Rev. Naporano is saying Grace before we all put on the feed bag. The mad inventor, Nick Adams, has brought along his latest invention which enables him to obtain anything on the table by remote control without lifting a finger. This is causing his classmates no end of dismay and chagrin. Steve Bacha, in the meantime, twangs on his jews' harp and plunks forth an old favorite "You're a Sweetheart".

Oh, here are two old timers—Stanley Sacewitz and Joe Hrdina who have just received their S. C. (Stone-Crusher) degrees from Ring Ling College. Flash! We just received a telegram from Dr. Prete, noted brain specialist. Quote: "Sorry to miss reunion stop had to attend conference concerning Cerebral Structure of the Medula Ablongata with emphasis on the metabolic vascillatory action" Unquote. As honorable ancestor once say, "He who takes apart can never put together again."

Next on our program we have Carl Martorana, tenor of the W.P.A. Opera House, who will sing "Il Toreador" dedicating it to Alfredo Grazul, well-known bull thrower. Everybody is swinging to the music and now—Oh! look who's entering—that lovely nurse, Rita Mulvey, accompanied by Doctor Gabriel Petti. (Moral: Don't get sick.) Late as usual, the president of the Y.W.C.A. and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kiamie (Tessie Martorano) appear. As honorable ancestor once say, "He who comes in late is less bored." Professor Miceli, eminent chemical engineer, follows with his butler, William Butler. I will now turn the mike over to Mario Micchelli broadcasting from the terrace. Here we go! * * * *

Howdy, friends, over in a secluded corner I see Joe Dominguez—still proposing to Rita Rubino, who looks very lovely. Well, Joe, while there's life there's hope. To my right under a palm tree I see Rosetta Mason and John Wright pitching woo. They now work in a Soft Soap Factory. Their romantic mood is enhanced, therefore, by the wafted strains of the mad maestro, Irving Bechefsky, as he plays his violin arrangement of "Soap Sud Symphony" or "I'm forever bowing bubbles". Circling for a landing on the roof is John Schettino in his autogyro with patented brassy uplift, no draft, knee action, swivel-topped propellor and Betty Giordano. He is telling her that he's out of gas so she is preparing to bail out in a Tymonko Parachute, "The Parachute That Opens—Or Else."

Returning the broadcast to the ballroom now! !

Ahoy, folks! We've arrived just in time to see the floor show. It'll floor you. Charles Castanedo of the Ballet Charlotte Russe, assisted by Marie Lennert, Pearl Herbst and Josephine Criscuolo, is doing an acrobatic dance. Helen Belott will follow as the Snake Charmer from Old East Side.

The Northwest Monte Carlo Ballet now appears with Adele Skeberdis as prima ballerina, supported by Amelia Sygnarski, Jennie Lania, and Mary Kobulyar. I say supported, as Mme. Skeberdis is having difficulty in keeping her feet aloft. They will execute (and how) "The Dying Swan" or "Who Killed Cock Robin?" And so concludes the floor show. But hold it folks!—Here comes Steve Lordi running out on the floor with a water pail. (A left-over from football days.) He's going to do a buck and wing number. He's really got something, though what it is I can't make out from here. Oh yes, he's got the bird.

I see the big business clique has just entered. There is Clarence Meyer, who brought out the Squeakless Shoe and Marie Farro, model for Wurster's Worsted Yarns. Behind them is Jack Inamorata, Taily-Ho Tailors' Inc., followed by Nathalene Page who won the title, Miss Muscles of 1938, recently.

And here comes Miss Virginia Murtagh and her fiancee, Charles Collucci. The only difference between Colucci and McCarthy is that McCarthy is Bergen's stooge. Bringing up Collucci's rear as usual is his shadow, Pickles Brankner, of Dill and Company, with Edward Borek of the Borek Acid Company. Just at this moment arrives Pugnose Gaga—sorry, I mean Gega—the pugilistic sensation of the year. (Sensational as a sucker for a left hook.) His friend, that rass'lin rascal, Alex Maccia, known professionally as Man Mountain Dope, is with him. Charles Gerard, coach of the Hoboken No Sox, follows.

The stage is being set at this moment for a Romeo & Juliet scene, as played by those Shakespeareans, Romeo Ranero and Juliet Tamburro. Romeo and Ranero are very similar. The only difference between them is that Romeo is good looking.

Dorothy Happel is being restrained by that bouncing bouncer, William Cziraky from giving first aid to the expiring Juliet. Dot is now a Red Cross Nurse. Attention, pliz! We have just learned that Rose McCabe now known on the stage as See-Money See-Money cannot be with us tonight as she is starring in the premiere of that new show "The Southern Physician" or "Dr. Baltimore, M.D." We are honored to have with us those two spicy persons, Gerald McCann of the Tin Cann Co. and Lucy Pepe of the No Sneeze Pepper Corp.

We will now pause for station identifications. STATION ESHS—11 P.M.—M-A-R-T-I-N-K-O- Martinko watch time—the watch with the noiseless tinkle.

This is Albert Daher, resuming the broadcast with those three missing links, Marie Malheiro, Antoinette Cerami and Genevieve Palma singing, "I near mist der train."

Mike Solowey will now recite "Ode on A Slowpoke" by Joe Trembick. Renewing old acquaintances, we have here Roman Kostrowski, professor of History. With him is Helen Laskowicz of the Rubber Band Company. Just entering is Frances Foster and Elizabeth Barrett of Park Avenue, who became rich overnight by mixing a 2-way cocktail, "The Mule", a cocktail with a kick.

Next we have Angelina Catena, bluest of the blues singers, singing "Dark Eye, Black Eye, Otschi Tchornya, Cock Eye". She is not only breaking our hearts but our eardrums. Do my eyes deceive me or is that Alice Rogoza, who recently won a beauty contest sponsored by the Sadie Mack Truck Co.? She and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Solomita (Lucille Pulido) appear much interested in the chatter of Katie Corra, now the radio comedienne, "Baby Crooks". Walter Muserick and Stanley Pociask, the truant officers, just came rushing in. They were going to play hookey but our strawberry ice cream dissuaded them. And now, folks, here's a little surprise!—Ed Szemplenski will give a short talk on "How to Give a Hot Foot Correctly." Ed, with his stooge, Stan Uryniak, is now employed by the "We Blow Up All Over the World" Balloon Company.

Some of our Broadway-ites just entered: Lucy Tortorella of the cast of "Tortorella Flats", James Verdi, owner of Verdi's Opera House and Beatrice Greene, star of "Greene Pastures." Say, who's that fellow with the magnifying glass who just crept in? Beg pardon—it's Vincent Cecero of the Scotland Yard force. Vincent gained fame at East Side when he solved "The Case of the Missing Calabrese" or "A Day At the Lyric".

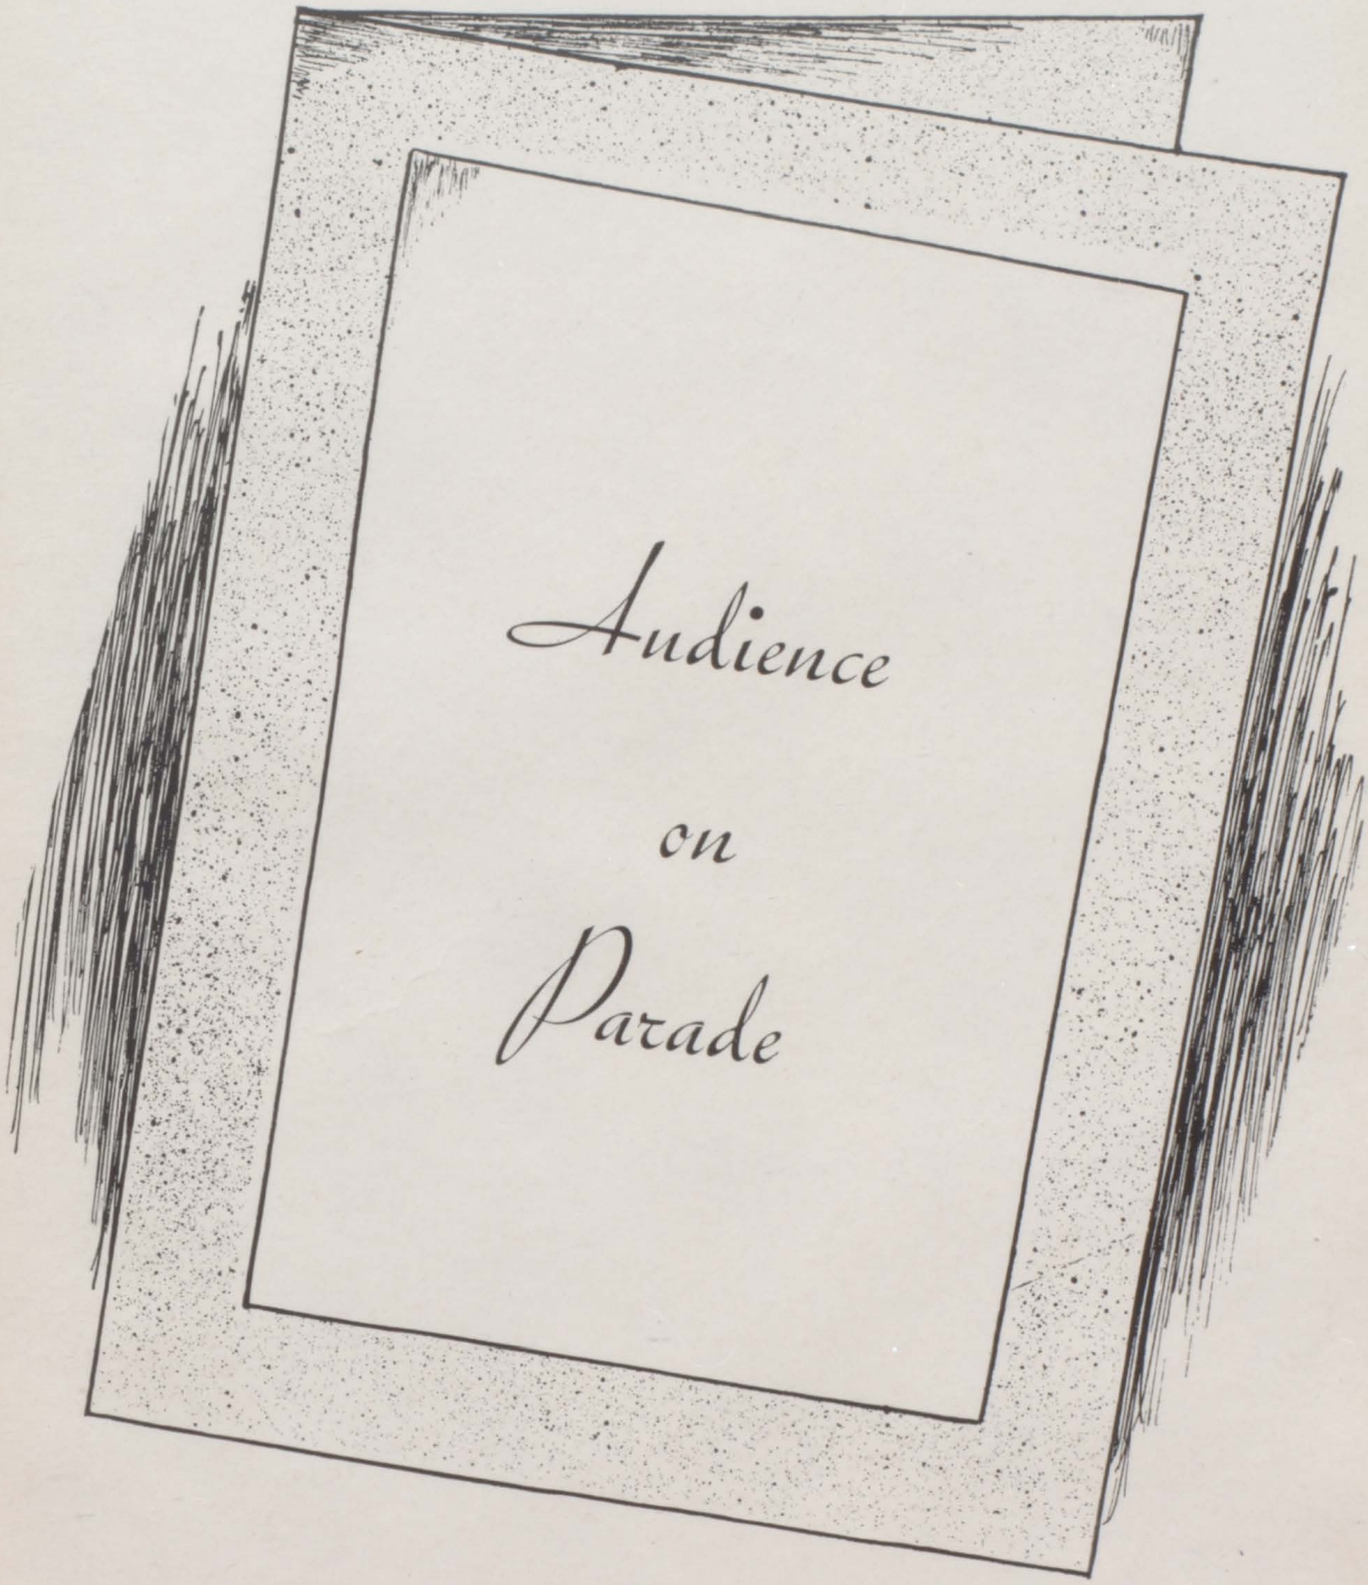

Alex "Bluebeard" Olkowitz, president of the Root Beer Without the Root Company, just arrived with his several sweethearts. And there's Adeline Santa Maria of the Columbus Dress Shoppe, wearing one of her own fetching creations. Her escort is Daniel Scotti of the Scotti Kennels. Over in the corner are Loretta Kervel, Pauline Felsenfeld and Mathilda Rickes, knitting and talking wildly. These girls are now members of the Spinsters' Organization. Eleanor Moccio, glamorous fashion model, is looking particularly stunning tonight. She is escorted by the much-dazzled financiers, Schadt of the Gunshot Works and Vazzano of the Vazzano Oil Corporation.

Ouch! 'Scuse it folks but Lilly Krulikowski, of the tribe, just hit me with an arrow. Charles Deczynski and Anthony Rodriguez, employees of a House Haunting Corporation are playing safe and are standing in front of the target. With them are their better halves, Frances Bilik and Angelina Policastro.

And now—we come to the grand finale! The entire company, led by Mme. Taliercio of the Follies Bergiere (?) will join in Old East Side songs as Lucille Petolino, Palmina Aulita, and Muriel Allen, the Shivering Sisters of the Trembling Trapeze fly through the air with the greatest of ease. On the floor below, Jane Motyka, lion-tamer, is subduing Nick Pastewait, while Celia Prignano and Mary Anemon, jiu-jitsu artists, tie Steffie Meshar and Lorraine Cort in knots. Michael Giacini with his head stuck through a hole in a piece of canvas is defying the skill of that protege of Dizzy Dean, Lester "Wacky" Price, who is hurling baseballs at him. Meanwhile Lygia Anunciacao and Ann Stec, crazy comediennes, are telling jokes to the crowd as fast as Ray Helfrich, Joke Renovater, can remake the old puns that Anthony Genovese, inhumane humorist, is telling him.

In the midst of such gayety, we conclude our program. Tune in again next year, folksies. Until then, I am your addled announcer, Albert Daher, signing off.

This program was brought to you through the courtesy of the Amalgamated Torch Company.

WE can breathe a sigh of relief, knowing that when we leave our school will be in the hands of the girls and boys above. Our successors are a jolly group, and with Miss Godsey and Mr. Kettenring, the charming couple in the foremost foreground, in charge, we know they'll make their 4A term a memorable one.

Good luck!

4B Class

Service Squad

"SERVICE with a smile"—say they. And they mean it. Always on hand to keep order, the Service Squad is an indispensable East Side organization.

3A Class

COMING up! That's our 3A class! Soon to be where we have been! We'll be rooting for them.

Latin Club

HERE they are! our roving Romans, a throng of happy-go-lucky Latin students. They've been leaders in putting East Side High School on the map—and how! Miss Godsey, the lady in the dark dress with the white collar, is the adviser.

Ave atque vale, amici!

Archery Club

THE Archery Club, under Miss Gilbert (see her in the center there?) aims to prepare girls for successful careers as wives. Take warning, ye future husbands! They can bring down a man at fifty paces!

Photo Patrons

HI HO! HI HO! To the Photo Club we go!

They've seen to it that East Side is a part of the motion picture industry. Bulletins, talks, discussions, have all been employed to ma[illegible] us "movie-conscious". Indeed the rapt group above is now at work on a great epic, a stupendous production, "It Can Happen." The adviser, Miss Martin, is the lady on whom the camera is trained. The cameraman is Rudolph Rowland, president, and General Engineer of Everything In General.

Italian Club

WITH a "vieni, vieni, vieni, spaghet, spaghet, spaghetti", our Italian Club marches onward. Joy and fun are their harvests but—on the serious side—they delve into studies of Italy, today and yesterday.

The electric fellow you see in the center of the front row is Mr. Petruzzelli, Il Duce of the organization. Dominic Prete, president, sits on the left.

Vive Circolo Italiano!

Library Club

HERE are the shy sweet maidens who aid one in one's search for Oliver Twist and Elementary Biology—and bring 'em back alive!

Miss Johnson, chief librarian, is in the center.

Announcer Staff

STOP the presses! It's a scoop!" That's the cry of this group. And in the last two years we've seen our Announcer materialize into a first-rate paper. Credit goes to Mr. Laughton, the bundled up gentleman in the first row.

"A paper with a purpose"—that's our Announcer.

Junior and Senior Band

With their instruments before them, the baton in the air, one and two and three, now commence, go! Hooray for the band!

Dance Orchestra

"Thanks for the memory" that we will be able to carry away with us of the swing music of East Side's orchestra. They have done their best to make many an occasion gay!

Senior Orchestr

Glee Club

WITH a smile and a song the Glee Club carries on, singing their troubles away. And it is no wonder that the club is a success! Why shouldn't it be? Any club is with a group that are sincerely interested in warbling and in the art of oscillations.

Honor Society

HERE is a picture one is proud to be in! And here is a society East Side is proud to sponsor!

The Honor Society, under Miss Roys (at the extreme left), is the organization that furnishes you with a certificate if you succeed in getting on the term honor roll two times. Their parties and dances are events to be looked forward to.

WITH the coming of a new teacher, a new club has also appeared. For all females of the species interested, this club has done big things. Trips here, trips there! What will be their next place to visit? But whatever it is, they are sure to have an entertaining time.

That's Miss Smith, the adviser, seated in the center.

Health Club

Safety Squad

NEWARK cannot be without a police force nor East Side without a Safety Patrol;—and the strong silent men pictured above furnish East Siders with much-needed protection. Always on the job are they.

The determined looking gentleman, third from the left, is Mr. Davidheiser, the adviser.

A Capella Choir

MANY'S the assembly period that these sweet voices have brightened. Indeed, they all look about ready to burst into song right now, seated here with Miss Wilder, the adviser.

Literary Club

SCRIBBLE, dibble, pencil nibble-and we expect this gay group to flood the market with best-sellers soon. Miss Jessie C. Wagoner is adviser.

SOME MEN ARE GREAT BECAUSE—

They themselves are fired with an ambition and determination that defies adversity.

Lincoln did not permit early poverty to restrict his horizon forever.

Napoleon never became discouraged because he was of limited stature.

Columbus ignored bitter criticism and persecution and sailed on to find a new world.

Set your goal and strive for it with an unswerving purpose.

To the Members of the Class of June 1938:

Many of you have expressed satisfaction with the portraits of you made by us for the pages of this book.

Most of you now have at home the finished products of our studio, the well mounted, good looking portraits that resulted when our skilful photography was brought to bear on such alert, intelligent, and good looking folks as yourselves.

In the years to come there will be birthdays, and weddings, and children, and family groups, Christmases, Mother's days, and other occasions when new photographs must be had. We hope you will remember us then again, and we will do a good job for you then also.
